Program Note

The first movement of my Concerto for Alto Saxophone and Orchestra (2008) is one of two works I composed as a personal response to the hurricane Katrina disaster. The first piece, Das Echo von New Orleans (for saxophone and piano, 2006), was commissioned, premiered, and recorded by Farrell Vernon. That work is a brief, three-movement fantasy on the German Catholic hymn Grosser Gott.

My second “Katrina” work is the first movement of this concerto -- a “berceuse” (or lullaby) intended as salve for a wounded city. Slow, lyrical sections enclose a faster, more virtuosic central section.

The second movement (a passacaglia) consists of a theme section and six variations. A cadenza separates the fifth and sixth variations. The passacaglia theme is played at the beginning of the movement by a solo double bass and can be found in some form virtually throughout the movement.

While the solo saxophone part in this concerto is certainly difficult, it was not specifically written to be a virtuosic showpiece. I have, for example, written pieces for saxophone that make use of extended techniques (multiphonics, tongue slaps, pitch bending, etc.), but the melodic material of this concerto simply did not require these techniques (other than some fluttertongue in the second movement). In fact, my main desire in the first movement was simply to showcase the beautiful tone of the soloist I had hoped would premiere the work: Griffin Campbell. The saxophone can without a doubt be agile and loud, but I feel that beauty of tone is a quality that is sometimes overlooked in new pieces for saxophone.

Duration: ca. 9 mins.

The saxophone part in this score is transposed.
